Tips for Locating and Evaluating Information

- Use two or more different kinds of source materials, such as books, magazines, web sites, and interviews.
- Start with a general search and then narrow it down and zero in on your target.
- Use one source to find others. Follow the links on Internet web sites about your topic. Use a book's bibliography to find other sources.
- Keep an accurate record of information sources including Web site addresses, book titles, author, names, and publication facts for a bibliography.
